[PHILIPPINES, 14/5/2018] "Living in Metro Manila is an ideal situation for many people, as it offers a fast-paced lifestyle and features the latest and best in entertainment and commerce. These benefits, however, come with drawbacks, which include pollution and the terrible rush hour traffic. Fortunately, areas outside the metro, such as the south, offer a more suitable place to live.

Great Reasons to Move out of the Metro

Relocating to a place outside Metro Manila can be advantageous for individuals. One benefit of moving out of the metro is less air pollution. When it comes to Metro Manila, the Western Pacific Regional Office of the World Health Organization (WHO) along with the Department of Health (DOH) rated the air quality in the capital as polluted beyond the tolerable levels. On the other hand, areas outside the Philippine capital provide better air quality thanks to more trees and open spaces.

Apart from healthier air, people living outside the Metro face less traffic. According to a Boston Consulting Group study, Metro Manila commuters and motorists are stuck in traffic for an average of 66 minutes per day. Thus, people who choose to live outside the Metro are better off, as they spare themselves from the headaches of city traffic.
