

Buhler Law Office Assists Individuals and Businesses in Securing Visitor Visas

Date : Apr 13, 2018

Getting a U.S. visitor visa is a long process in most countries and may not always end in an approval. People and businesses that need help obtaining a visitor visa can turn to Buhler Law Office.

[PROVO, 04/13/2018] An article in The New York Times reported that for much of the world, a visit to the United States means undergoing an application process that can take quite some time. Moreover, the result of the application in some countries often ends in a denial. Buhler Law Office provides assistance in acquiring a valid visa.

Visa Denial Statistics and Reasons

Â

According to statistics from the Bureau of Consular Affairs, 13 countries registered a denial rate of more than 60 percent in 2015. The highest rates were in the Middle Eastern and African countries, including Somalia, Syria, and Ghana. When a consular officer denies the visa application, some of the common reasons for the refusal are: Incomplete visa application, Misrepresentation of a material fact, Inadequate proof of financial support, Unable to overcome the presumption of being an intending immigrant.

Obtaining Assistance in Getting a Visitor Visa

Â

Fortunately, help exists for those who are having difficulties securing a visa to visit the United States. Individuals and businesses can turn to Buhler Law Office for assistance in getting a U.S. (B-1/B-2) visit visa.

Â

As a trusted Utah-based law firm specializing in immigration law, Buhler Law Office has years of experience in helping clients overcome their visa denials. It encourages clients to rely on the law firm's understanding of the visa application process and paperwork instead of attempting to take care of the situation on their own.
